RACE PREJUDICE!

"I am convinced myself that there is no more evil in this present world than race prejudice. It is the worst single thing in life now. If justice had held together more business, cruelty and abomination than any other sort of error in the world." — W. E. B. DUBOIS

OUR INTEREST IN COMMON

The approaching bi-racial campaign of this city surely presents a mighty challenge to the colored people to show their intelligence, strength of courage, and sound judgment.

As in the past, there will be those who will cast their votes for certain candidates for various reasons, therefore, an entire solid vote for one candidate is hardly to be expected. But there ought to be, for our own protection and benefit, some organized effort among us which will serve to unify our voting strength to the end that the power of our vote may be felt in the most effective way.

The masses are ready for just this kind of thing. They want to get somewhere. They see that we are still in the wilderness. They are longing for the "go forward," but the leadership is stalling still or marking time.

To go forward at this time will require wise and sane leadership. Not the self-seeking kind that has blinded our path for the past forty years, but the self-disinterested kind that has the welfare of the people at heart.

The job which we face with itching palms, cannot be trusted for leadership; not that seeking a job is wrong, or that it is wrong to expect monetary consideration for service, but when so-called leaders are seeking jobs for themselves, it is but human to expect them to think of self first. Experience has taught us that in most instances, one loses sight of the interest of the people when seeking places for self. So the challenge to us today, the city of St. Louis, is to find that unselfish leadership that will speak and act for us in an unselfish way.

We realize the difficulties that of necessity must come in our way when we attempt to organize. We also know that it is next to impossible for all of us to follow one leader; but we can come together for counsel and through committees. We can come and reason together, for, in the final analysis, whatever affects one, affects the other to a greater or lesser degree.

WILL THEY SUPPORT EITHER?

Congressman L. C. Dyer has written to the St. Louis daily papers urging these publications to support his efforts to break up lynching in this country by advocating federal anti-lynching laws.

Of course, it is hardly to be expected that any of these newspapers will support such a law because that would look too much like a sincere effort to really put an end to lynching is being made.

We have noted that some of these papers are giving as their reason for not supporting federal control of lynching, that it is impractical, and a usurpation of states rights. The question of states rights is a very indefinite term, and no doubt, hard to define. Judging by the number of present federal laws, that are closely allied with states laws, it looks to us as if the powers of the government have a pretty wide latitude.

There may rightly be some doubt, however, or differences of opinion, as to what constitutes states rights, but we all agree that the United States Government owes to every citizen, by the declaration of its Constitution, the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. These are the natural common benefits that should be enjoyed by all. When a state fails, therefore, by reason of lax law enforcement or by inability to protect life, and assure the citizens these benefits, it is the duty of the government to step in and make good its declaration of the principles enumerated in its Constitution.

In other words, the United States Government owes these things through the local or state governments. It is, therefore, incumbent upon the federal government to see to it that the local or state officials do their duty.

There seems to be no use of discussing even the remotest possibility of the states, especially the southern states, and those associated with the southern spirit, passing a law, or doing anything else to stop lynching in their borders. For more than twenty years, lynching has been the practice of the southern and several states, and that of the United States. These lynchings have been protected under the guise of states rights. This cry has continued until it has become a huge joke. No one who thinks any longer has any faith in the "sincerity" of such cries.

At the daily papers of St. Louis are really sincere about states rights, and think that the state can, and should, pass such laws as would protect its citizens from the disgraceful mob-violence, then let them show Mr. Dyer by getting behind a law to be introduced in the present legislature that will, at least, prevent a lynching in the state from looking so much like a holiday in a heathen land.

We all, more or less, have seen the picture representing Justice in the form of a woman blindfolded with a pair of balances in her hand as a symbol of justice, and equality before the law. It might act as a general reminder to some of our judges if one of these symbols were placed on their desks while trying some cases.

In helping others, in an unselfish way, we oftentimes help ourselves to a most surprising degree.

When we are all worked up over some act of indiscretion on the part of our fellowman, let us think of his words when He said: "He that is without sin, let him cast the first stone."

Let those who talk so much about states rights think a little more about human rights.

"History repeats itself," so said the speaker. The great men of the past left their footprints on the sands of time by being strong and courageous. They dared to do the right despite the howling of the mob, or the lust for office. We will see some more brave men when we have those who are willing to follow the footsteps of those gone on before.

Custom has so shaped things in this country that we find it necessary for special mention to be made of our group when public officials are addressing the American public. We wish it were not necessary, but it is, and we, therefore, expect it.

AGED BLACKSMITH RECALLS DAYS OF "AULD LANG SYNE"

[illegible]

Born on a Plantation

According to his story, he was born Christmas day, 1829, on a plantation near the town of Beaufort, S.C., where he lived until he was 10 years old.

"After they were there four or five weeks," he began to play "Dixie," and I'll remember the longest I have heard him play since that time. I can just see how every Negro in the band, playing with all his might and soul, and doing his best to get the white folks some crying, shouting and the women of the slaves who were chained up coming louder

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 31.—According to figures compiled by the United States census bureau, the Kansas State Penitentiary, where he claims that long life is hereditary in his family, several of his mother's family living to be nearly 100 years old.

Mr. Douglass has a faint remembrance of the day when he was born. He was ordinarily in General Pike during the early days of the "hill war" and he remembers the day when the "Missouri-Kansas" war. The first money he ever earned was as a clerk of the blacksmith shop, when he was 12 years old. He has been passing through Kentucky on his way to the border.

He said that the Klux was the worst of the worst.

He heard the reading of the proclamation set in 1865 and was on the streets of St. Louis when President Lincoln was assassinated. He claims to have seen the assassin, John Wilkes Booth, and he says he saw him with his own eyes, but he does not know where he was at the time, and also remembers the line when white people were passing through the city.
